THE PROBLEM

Maryland laws have created a system that prevents the public from scrutinizing and holding accountable police officers who brutalize and mistreat people.

THE PEOPLE

People hurt by police, particularly Black and brown individuals, immigrants, LGBTQI+ people, and those experiencing mental health crises.

THE LEGISLATION

- Remove legal barriers that prevent public access to records of police misconduct.
- Ensure public participation in holding police officers accountable for abuse and brutality.

While legislative details may change, we expect police reform to be an important issue for our partners in 2020.
